

*An intriguing client.
A passionate attorney.
A deadly game.*

Top global technology lawyer Tornait “Torn” Sagara knows he shouldn’t get involved with his beautiful client, Saya Brooks, whose revolutionary lightning-on-demand invention will solve climate change and render all other energy sources obsolete. But their shared connection as hafu (half Japanese, half American) draws them irresistibly together.

Saya’s technology could save the world, but what’s good for the planet is bad news for those who profit from the status quo. Now, someone wants to stop Saya from commercializing her invention and will go to any lengths—even murder—to do so. When Torn takes Saya for a spin on his motorcycle, they are viciously attacked. That death-defying battle on a crowded Tokyo expressway is only the start of Torn’s wild ride.

As the violence escalates, Torn discovers that everything he values—his reputation, his family, and even his life—is on the line. Racing from the boardrooms of Tokyo to the wilds of Russia in a desperate search for the truth, Torn is forced to face his own flaws and discover what really matters most.

Author L. M. (“Mark”) Weeks was born in Alaska and practices law in Japan. He was Managing Partner of the Tokyo office of global law firm Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP for over ten years, representing technology companies worldwide. Mark is fluent in Japanese, has a black belt in aikido, and is an avid motorcyclist.

For more about Mark and his books, visit LMWeeks.com.
To connect with Mark on social media, visit Linktr.ee/LMWeeks.

FICTION / THRILLERS / LEGAL

$15.99 U.S.

“A memorable work ... stirring start to a series.” – Kirkus Reviews

L. M. WEEKS

L. M. WEEKS
BOTTLED LIGHTNING

*An intriguing client.
A passionate attorney.
A deadly game.*

BOTTLED
LIGHTNING

